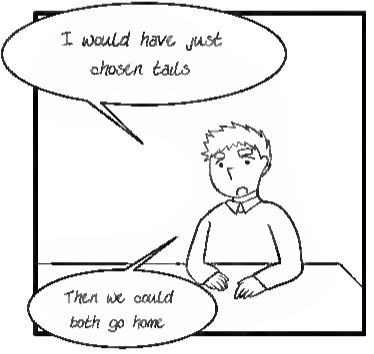
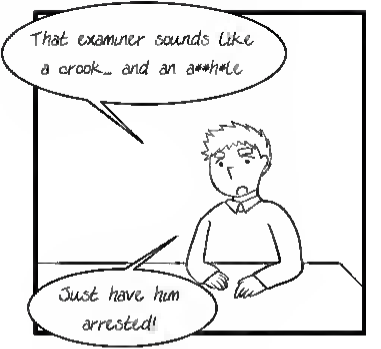
"Alright" he says, and gives you a single pencil.

"You must use this one pencil to complete the exam. However there is only going to be one pencil between the two of you.

You can use it yourself, or you can give it to your classmate. What will you do?"

Extra 3





That examiner sounds like a crook... and an ah*le
Just have him arrested!

You're going to run out of the exam and report him?

Just Ask Yuli

by Yulius Efferven

In our next lesson we will have a discussion so please remember to bring your answer for these two questions:

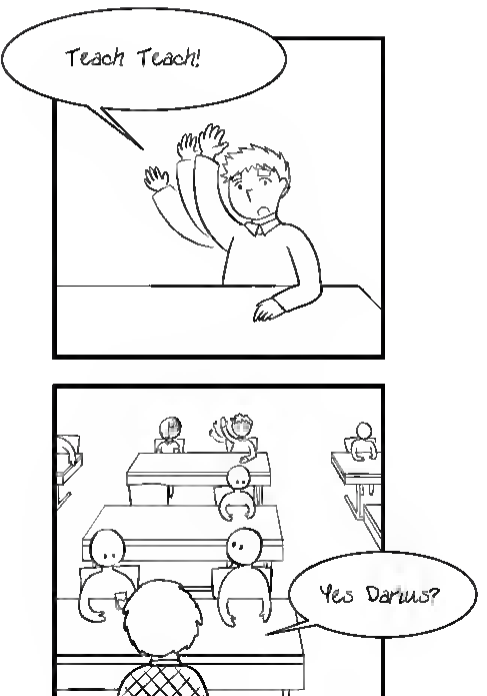
1. What would you do in this situation?

and

2. What do you think is the morally correct response?

Students, today I'd like you'd imagine a scenario.

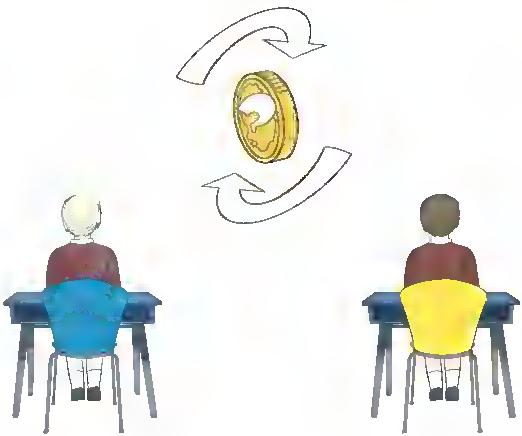
Extra 1



You and another student are about to re-sit an assessment in order to pass the year and graduate.

You both sit down and the examiner asks.

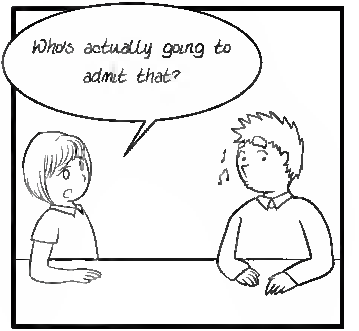
"Heads or Tails?"



Extra 2

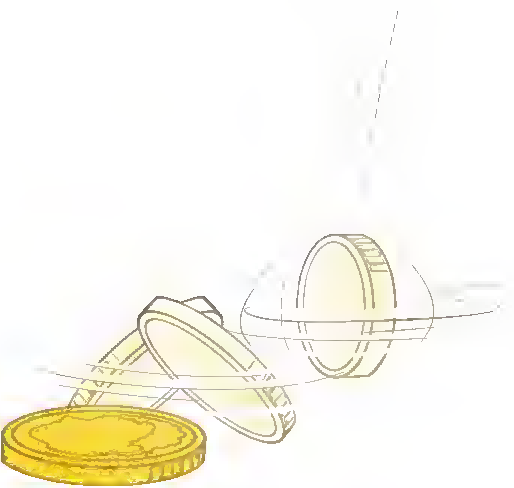
This is obviously a trick question.
There's probably no right answer.

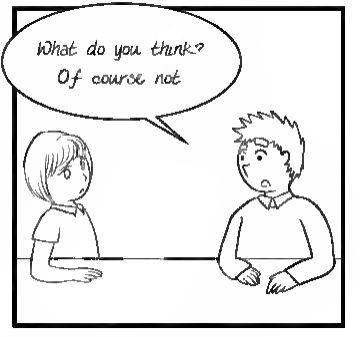
Isn't it to check who's a selfish prick?



Who's actually going to admit that?

The examiner flips the coin and it lands on heads.





What do you think?
Of course not

You can get that delivered these days

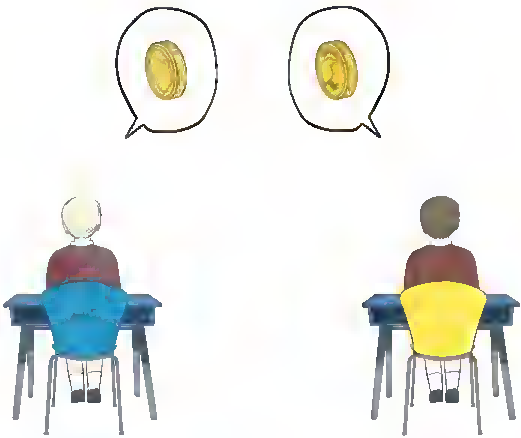
"Heads" you say.



This is a work of fiction any resemblenace to existing persons real or otherwise is purely coincidental